PRINTERS' ELECTION TODAY.

Columbia Typographical Union Chooses Officers and Delegates. The annual election of officers of Co-lumbia Typographical Union, No. 161, to-day, is developing into one of the livelless and most interesting contests for union place in this city; The contest is not made to uphold any principle of unionism. Nor, as was said of the election some time ago, is there any politics in it. So far as the cam-paign has developed, the election is a friendly contest among the members for union honors, the aspirants for the dif-ferent offices relying solely on their personal popularity for success.

In previous elections the fight was to

In previous elections the fight was to a great extent between administration and anti-administration candidates, in which the employes of the Government Printing Office were generally arrayed in solid phalanx against the "down-town" members of Columbia Union. This year, however, the conditions are entirely changed. The candidates for the principal offices are all from the same section. For instance, the two aspirants for presidential honors are employes of the Government Printing Office, while the candidates for the vice presidency are what are known as "down-town" men. This circumstance eliminates the influence which sectionalism has heretofore played in determining the result of elections in the union.

The voting at the seventy-two chapels of the union will begin at their several headquarters at 3 p. m. and continue until 6 p. m., with the exception of the secretary's chapel, the members of which will vote at the office of the secretary of Columbia Union at Typographical Temple. The returns of the election will be made to the board, which will be in session at Typographical Temple, where the votes will be canvassed and tabulated.

HAS LIVED OVER A CENTURY.

HAS LIVED OVER A CENTURY. Sister Ellen Joseph, Who Was

This City Many Years Ago. Sister Ellen Joseph, colored, who en leys the distinction, both in point of age and in length of service, of being the oldest religiouse, it is said, in the entire country, is suffering from nervous prostration at the mother house of her order, the convent of St. Frances, corner of Chase Street and Forest Place Baltimore. Her condition is not serious, but, in view of her advanced age, her physiclan has given strict orders, forbidding all visitors, as well as anything that would tend to excite or tire her.

Sister Ellen Joseph is said to be on hundred and seven years old. When she first put on the habit of her order, the Oblate Sisters of Providence, sixty years ago, she was already in the prime of life. During her sixty years of service she has performed nearly every task ever set for performed hearly every task ever set for a member of her community. Connected with the convent is an orphan asylum, in which there are about seventy-five little girls. Nobody has been more active in the training of the children than Sister Ellen. She has been equally active in her deeds of charity outside the convent. For the last two years she has not left the the last two years she has not left the building, and for some time before that she had not been able to take an active share in the duties of the community. Most of her time now is spent in a whee ed chair in her room.

She has retained her faculties to the present and has an interesting fund of recollections. She is very fond of visitors, and enjoys telling them of her early ors, and enjoys telling them of her early life, particularly of her experiences dur-ing the burning of Washington by the British in 1814. She was born in Mari-boro', Prince George County, of slave parents, and was brought to this city with her parents by the family of her master, a short time before the arrival of the British. Alarmed at the news of the approach of the red-coats they all fled by night from Washinston. From fled by night from Washinston. From approach of the red-coats they all by night from Washington. From fied by night from Washington. From their place of refuge they saw the burning of the Capitol, the President's house and the Treasury.

After the departure of the British the family returned to this city, and Bister Ellen remembers quite vividity some of the prominent people whom she saw there later, among them Presidents Madison and Monroe.

She was baptized into the Catholic faith about 187, by Father Screiver at old St. Matthew's Church. About this time she was given her freedom and went to Balthmore with her parents. She was employed for a number of years by the Misses Cottringer, who kept a fashiona-Misses Cottringer, who kept a fashiona-ble school for young ladles on Franklin Street in that city. In 1838 she entered the order of the Oblate Sisters of Provi-dence, being received by the founder. Rev. J. Joubert. She is the last survivor of the band received into the order by Father Joubert, who died in 1842. Ten years ago Sister Ellen celebrated her golden jubilee, the fiftieth anniver-sary of her entrance into the sisterhood renewing her yows after the solemn high es Cottringer, who kept a fashion:

and Admiral Cervers, Jimmie Micheal, the Welsh won champion middle-distance rider of the country, arrived here this morning. He was accompanied by a farge party of pacers and the officials interested in his management. There was quite a crowd at the depot.

Dave Shafer, Michael's trainer, in speaking to a Times reporter, said that his charge's condition was perfect, and that this evening he would be able to ride in his fastest form. "The rain hast even ing at Baltimore was a great disappoint ment to Michael," hes aid, "as the little wonder felt like riding. He would have wonder felt like riding. He would have been able to set a rattling good clip. He still feels like riding, and I venture to predict that this evening he will try to smash one or more of the world's records for the distance. Michael had his heart set on riding in Baltimore, the occasion marking his initial appearance in the Monumental City. However, he will have another opportunity, as the race will come off at the same track tomorrow evening. In case it should rain in this city today the race would have to be postponed until Friday evening, instead of Thursday evening, as previously understood, on account of the Baltimore postponement."

Shafer also remarked that just at pres-

postponement."

Shafer also remarked that just at present the midget is in the best form he has ever yet attained, and that he could meet any middle distance rider in the world, and with good pace easily defeat them. greatest satisfaction that Michael ever got out of a race meet was in the twenty-five mile race last Saturday at the Man-imitian Beach track, New York city, when he defined Text. mattan Beach track, New York city, when he defeated Tom Linton, whom he regards as his greatest rival. Linton has been saying some mean things about Michael, while the latter never opened his mouth about Linton. The result of the race speaks more plainly than words ever could or ever would."

With the party of Michael there were in all this relates.

With the party of Michael there were in all thirty-three people. The majority of them are his pacemakers, though by the agreement entered into some time ago, the number of men to set the pace is limited to twenty on each side. The balance of the Michael pacemaking crew will mort likely act as rubbers for the men at the finish of the race.

The first race will be held at 8 o'clock sharp, it being the novice event, with a number of local aspirants for fame on the cycle track entered. The other preliminumber of local appirants for fame on the cycle track entered. The other preliminary events will be run off without loss of time, including the exhibitions by Edouard Taylore, the French rider, and hour champion of the world, and Fred Titus, the five-mile unpaced champion. The big event will be the last thing on the program. Lieut. Hobson, the hero of the Merri-mas, will probably be present. The use of a box was tendered him this morning. An invitation was also extended to Admiral Cervera to occupy a box, and it is likely that the gallant Spaniard will come over from Annapolis, provided he can get an extension of his parole.

The full list of the entrants for the two-mile handicap, professional, is as follows: W. Fred Sims, scratch; Billle Sims, thirty yards; F. C. Hoyt, Bridgeport, Conn. yards; F. C. Last Sunday morning Edgar Brightbill asked his brother to get him a morning paper. The latter left the house and has not been seen since. He had about $15 or not been seen since. He had about $10 or $20 with him, and it was thought at first that he may have gone to his home in Carlisle, Pa., to see his mother. She was communicated with and replied that she knew nothing of her son. The missing man is about five feet eight inches in height, weighs 150 pounds, is smooth faced, dark complexioned, has dark brown hair and gray eyes. He wore a dark blue serge suit, russet shoes, light Fedora hat, and red striped shirt.
